BRIGANDAGE.

GAMBLING HOUSES A DETERRENT.

[SHEUNG PO "SERVICE."]

Peking, Feb. 15.

Viceroy Chung Ming Ch'in a memorial to the Throne, in which he states that on the 1st day of the 2nd moon he will abolish the gambling tax, points out that since gambling houses are a great deterrent to brigandage, since they offer free shelter to homeless men, their closing will cause a great increase in the ranks of robbers.

He proposes to take the severest repressive measures at once.

CHINA'S ARMY.

[SHEUNG PO "SERVICE."]

Peking, Feb. 15.

The Lachuanpu (Board of War) has telegraphed to the provincial Generals urging them to recruit and train as many men as possible.

STAMP DUTIES.

[SHEUNG PO "SERVICE."]

Peking, Feb. 15.

SPIRIT MONOPOLY.

ITS EFFECT ON CANTON RICE MARKET.

[SHEUNG PO "SERVICE."]

Peking, Feb. 15.

The effect of the Canton spirit monopoly as now conducted is being considered by Cantonese officials in Peking.

At present the monopoly is put up for public tender, but the opinion of the officials is that it should be in the hands of the nine merchants' Guild.

The Guild controls the rice market, and prices soar when the monopoly leaves its control.

Telegrams will be sent to the Viceroy to this effect.

Telegrams.

THE PLAGUE.

[SHEUNG PO "SERVICE."]

Peking, Feb. 15.

The Foreign railway has resumed running.

The Wai Wu Pu has informed the Russian Minister that ten Chinese doctors, well versed in Western medicine, have been sent north to fight the plague.

YUNNAN.

WHY THE BRITISH TROOPS ENTERED THE PROVINCE.

[SHEUNG PO "SERVICE."]

Peking, Feb. 15.

The presence of British troops in Yunnan has been satisfactorily explained by Sir John Jordan, British Minister at Peking.

In reply to the representations of the Wai Wu Pu, His Excellency said that brigandage had reached such a pitch along the frontier that the British troops were compelled to operate against the marauders, since the Chinese authorities were unable to suppress them. No other reason actuated the occupation of Chinese territory.

This has been reported to the Grand Council, who will hold Viceroy Li responsible, not only for his failure to put down brigandage, but also for the alarmist telegrams in which he described the situation.

AMERICAN NEWS.

Washington, February 10.—The House of Representatives yesterday passed the bill providing for the reappointment of membership in that body under the new census. The total number of members in the House according to the new bill will be 435.

HOCKEY.

The semi-final of the Challenge Cup competition will take place on Friday, 17th inst., at Happy Valley, on the Hongkong Hockey Ground, between the Royal Engineers and the Maltrattas. Bully off at 4.30 p.m. sharp. The Maltrattas have a strong team, and their combination is excellent. A good game is expected, and lovers of hockey should not miss this game, as it will be one of the best in the competition.

BLUEJACKET IN TROUBLE.

John Neil, a blue jacket on H.M.S. Otter, was charged this morning before Mr. J. R. Wood with using abusive language on the Post Office, and assaulting a shroff. Defendant pleaded not guilty. Mr. Martin, Superintendent of the Registration Department of the Post Office, stated that at 3.20 p.m. Charles Poole made a report to him, and in consequence of it he went to the counter and saw one of the shroffs, bleeding from the nose. He asked him who did it, and he pointed to the defendant outside of the counter. Before this he heard some very foul language in English. Defendant said he wished to post the parcel and was given every opportunity to do so, but apparently he had no money to do so.

C. J. Poole stated that he was a clerk in the Post Office. One of the clerks told him that the defendant had struck the shroff. Defendant—Where were you when I was there with the parcel?—In the centre of the office. And you say that after you arrived I used abusive language?—Yes.

Chung Wah, shroff, said he was at the counter when the defendant came up with a parcel. Witness told him to go to the next office. Defendant lifted up the parcel with both his hands and after saying "One, two, three," knocked it against witness' face, and later he struck him a second time. His Worship (to defendant)—Did you have any drinks?—Yes, two pints of beer.

An officer of the ship said the defendant had a very good record. His Worship—I find you did assault this clerk and you did use bad language in the Post Office. I impose a fine of $7, or seven days imprisonment.

PICKPOCKETS ABROAD.

A Chinese woman had her watch and chain stolen yesterday at the race course. Another theft of this kind occurred in a booth, a European having his watch and chain neatly taken out of his waistcoat pocket.

A long coated Chinese was charged this morning with picking $3 odd from another man's pocket at the race course yesterday afternoon.

Complainant stated he was buying tickets in a booth and the defendant was at his side. The latter cut his pocket, and before he had time to disappear witness grabbed him by the queue and the people in the shed told him to charge him.

The case was remanded.

COMPANY REPORT.

SHANGHAI LAND INVESTMENT CO., LD.

In their 22nd annual report, the directors of the above company say that the past year cannot be considered unsatisfactory in view of the depression that has prevailed in Shanghai, though the net result falls short of previous years. The working account for 1910 has a credit balance of Tls. 426,043.16 as compared with Tls. 455,079.31 for 1909. The gross rentals show an increase of Tls. 19,102.75, but against this there is an increase in running expenses of Tls. 20,798.25. This increase in expenditure is largely due to decorative repairs made necessary by frequent changing tenancies and to expenditure in permanent improvements to houses on Chwang Hong Estate. The amount to the credit of profit and loss account, after adding Tls. 50,000 transferred from the equalization of dividends fund and deducting the interim dividend paid in July last, is Tls. 320,398.49 which the directors recommend for appropriation as follows:—Final dividend of 6 per cent (making 12 per cent for the year) on all fully paid-up shares Tls. 234,000.00; transfer to repairs and renewals account, Tls. 75,153.69; carry forward to New Account, Tls. 11,244.89.

SILVER MARKET.

The Silver market has undergone little change during the week, says the "L & C. Express" of the 13th ult. Forward was quoted at 1.8d. over spot until 11th inst., when the difference widened to 3-10d. This difference has been maintained. Both India and China have bought during the week, but China has also been a seller, the fall towards the close being partly due to this selling. The Paris Mint has bought 20,000 kilos, nearly 75,000, but otherwise the market has been rather quiet. At the close the tone is fairly steady with no decided tendency.

LOG BOOK.

The number and tonnage of vessels given by the Customs quarterly returns as entered and cleared at the port of Shanghai during the quarter ended December 31, 1910, was 4,427 vessels of 2,340,349 tons entered and 6,005 vessels of 2,410,228 tons cleared against 4,797 ships of 2,433,554 tons cleared in the same quarter of 1909.

Of the total entered 1,928,848 tons were under foreign flags and the remainder of 411,501 tons under the Chinese flag.

News was received at Shanghai that the Indo-China steamer Taisang, Captain R. Anderson, on her way down from Chinwangtao with coal, had sprung a leak and had been compelled to put into Port Arthur.

Mr. W. Murray, third engineer, Amara, has resigned.

Monday morning at 7 o'clock Messageries Maritimes' s.s. Oceanion arrived from Shanghai.

During the recent riots at Hankow the Indo-China steamer Kingsing, which was moored at the Bund, found herself in the direct line of fire and several bullets rattled in uncomfortable proximity to the crew. One shot struck the bridge and, passing through the screen, went through the woodwork at the back.

A sailor on the British steamer Lucio, which left Kobe on the 7th, for Yokohama, was attacked by scarlet fever, and was removed to the Kasugano infectious disease hospital. A case of smallpox took place on the British steamer Nippon in Kobe.

CHINA'S IMPORTS.

Newspaper scribes are prone to bewail the fate which necessitates that they should have to write about the mass of bewildering statistical returns which find a place in the ordinary Government Blue-books forwarded officially for the information of the Press. But the most brain-fagging Blue-book will make pleasant reading as compared with the Yellow-book issued by the Statistical Department of the Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs, from whom we have to acknowledge the receipt of their returns just issued for the year before last. It is a voluminous tome, consisting of nearly 300 quarto pages and from beginning to end it does not contain one paragraph of explanatory letterpress concerning the various matters dealt with. The contents are a page after page of columnar statistics. Yet, one can glean a certain amount of generally interesting facts by a patient perusal of the Yellow-book.

The total net value of foreign imports into China in the year under revision amounted to 418,158,000 Haikwan taels, an increase of 24,653,000 taels as compared with the preceding period of twelve months. Hongkong held by far the leading place amongst the importers of foreign goods to China—the value of her imports being 150,471,000 taels, or an increase of 219,000 taels over the previous year, but a decrease of more than 5,000,000 as against 1907. Imports from Great Britain fell off from 72,561,000 taels in 1908 to 68,230,000 taels, and showed a decrease in value of some 10,000,000 taels as against each of the years 1907 and 1908.

Macao's imports into China amounted to the value of 5,325,000 taels, a reduction of about half a million.

Singapore and the Straits Settlements exported to China goods to the value of 6,679,000 taels, an increase of over one million.

The imports from British India represented a value of 40,434,000 taels, or nearly ten millions more than in the twelvemonth that went before.

Japan increased her imports by some seven million taels, bringing the total value up to 59,975,000 taels. Germany sent imports to the value of a little over fifteen million taels, or about one million more than in the preceding year. The United States imported goods to the value of 32,607,000 taels—a decline of eight millions. It must be admitted that in view of Hongkong's position as chief importer of foreign goods into China, our Colony can hardly lay claim to have secured as large a share as might have been expected of enhanced trade with the Celestial Empire. In this respect she contrasts unfavourably with Japan, with British India, and slightly so with Germany—all of whom made comparatively large increases in the value of their import trade with China. The enhancement of British India's imports is rather remarkable when one considers recent regulations imposed upon the valuable opium traffic. The big fall in imports from the United States is not accounted for. As regards the value of direct foreign import into each Customs district, Shanghai is very far ahead with goods to the value of 192 million Haikwan taels. Canton came second with nearly 29 million taels, Kowloon had over 27 millions, Tientsin 25, and Hankow 17 millions. As regards imports describable as peculiar to China may be mentioned gin-seng, of which 290,000 cattie, valued at one and a half million taels, were sent into the country. Beech-do-mer was imported to the value of one and three-quarter million taels and birds' nests to the amount of 627,000 taels. About three and a quarter million taels' worth of foreign tea was also imported, mostly from Japan, Formosa and British India.

WARRANT ISSUED.

Mr. H. W. Firmstone, first magistrate, issued on Saturday, Feb. 4th, a warrant for the arrest of E. Cropley, on a charge of criminal breach of trust in respect of 3,000 shares in Kompas, Ltd., value $15,000.

This step was taken in consequence of information laid before his worship by Tan Hood Guan. The latter stated he was a member of a syndicate formed to purchase Sungei Bahru Estate. The total amount subscribed was $58,500, of which deponent contributed $13,500. The property was purchased and the conveyance made out in the name of E. Cropley, who, although not a member of the syndicate, had organised it. The syndicate subsequently sold the estate to Kompas, Ltd., the purchase price being $50,500 in 13,300 $5 shares. It was arranged that the shares should be issued to Mr. Cropley and that he should distribute them to the people to whom they really belonged. Deponent had been shown a letter signed by the secretaries of Kompas, Messrs. Gunn and Co., and dated November, 28, 1910, stating that 7,700 shares had been issued to Mr. Cropley. Deponent had received none of his shares and so far as he knew no member of the syndicate had received his shares. He believed Mr. Cropley had mortgaged 3,000 shares to Mr. Lee Choon Guan.

Other shares to the value of $15,000, stated deponent, had been handed to Soth & Co. instead of to the syndicate. A warrant, as stated, was issued. It is understood that, at the moment, Mr. Cropley is not in town.—"Straits Times."

SHIPPING AND THE PLAGUE.

The health authorities of the port of Shanghai have at last woken up to the necessity of taking stricter measures against the invasion of the Settlement by the plague, and on January 31, at a meeting of the Consular Body, sanction was given to the proposed regulations for the more effective prevention of infection from the North, says the "Leading Light." These regulations include quarantine of six days on all vessels arriving from infected ports and prohibits a vessel, after receiving pratique, from being berthed alongside a wharf. Such vessels will be compelled to discharge and load in the stream, and will only be allowed to work cargo during the hours of daylight. Provision will also be made to prevent the landing of rats by means of the lighters.

The plague has invaded Korea.

Major J. A. C. Somerville, from the War Office, has been nominated Military Attaché to the British Embassy in Tokyo in succession to the late Colonel Bogor.

The Japanese Antarctic Expedition under Lieutenant Shirase, has reached Wellington, New Zealand. All the members of the expedition are safe.

LIQUOR IMPORTS INTO CHINA.

There is only one other aspect of the question to which we intend to refer. This is a somewhat staggering increase in the spirits which passed through the Kowloon Customs district. Here the value is placed at Taels 48,821, as against Taels 2,710 for 1908 and Taels 17,170 for the year prior to that. At first sight it would appear to be a strange phenomena why there should be this great disparity between 1909 and the other two years quoted, and on enquiry we fail to gather any very explicit reason to account for the changed conditions. And the situation is made none the clearer by the fact that the import figures for Kowloon for 1910 show a further advance over those of 1909 of Taels 15,630. We learn that large quantities of foreign spirits are used in most of the samshu-making centres for mixing with the native wine in order to increase the strength and impart a flavour. Much of this mixed liquor is, we are told, re-imported into Hongkong and takes the place of foreign table wine at meals. It would therefore seem that the taste for foreign wine is on the increase among the Chinese and the samshu trade is meeting the demand in this way.

TROOPS ON THE FRONTIER.

And, while we can enter into conventions and understandings with Russia in the hope that they will be observed, no such faith is to be expected from China, whose tortuous policy and whose corrupt politicians have done so much towards exciting the suspicions of all the Powers who have had any dealings with her. The time seems to have come, however, to insist that China should rigidly define the frontiers of Tibet, so far as they touch Assam and Upper Burma. If communications are passing, as Chinese reports allege, between the British and Chinese Governments in regard to this matter, the object is doubtless to get the border defined. It is unlikely that there will be any fighting; but it is obvious that Great Britain must take prompt and firm measures to check military developments on the part of China which are a menace to the peace and security of her own frontier.

PAYMENT OF MEMBERS.

In view of the conflict of opinion existing between the view of the two parties on this question, when the matter comes up for discussion there can be little doubt that it will afford one of the most interesting debates of the session. At the same time, in view of the majority which the Liberals can command, should the House divide and agree to the introduction of a Bill sanctioning the payment of members by the State, unless vetoed by the King it will become law. Present indications point, moreover, to the success of the movement and it would seem that a salary of £500 a year will be sanctioned, though it has not yet been decided whether it will be a payment to every member of the House, or only to those whose private position does not allow them to stand without assistance.

THE RAGE FOR FRINGE.

The soft fall of fringe holds for the Parisienne a charm that it is difficult to rival. Gowns, wraps, underskirts, and hats all are hand-trimmed with beautiful fringe. On a petticoat will come a silk fringe in vandyke fashion, and on a filmy overdress for an evening gown a flourish from knee to foot of chenille fringe. From ornaments of every description, large or small, depend clusters of beaded strings, and soft graceful fringes decorate the edges of evening wraps whilst more charming still are long fringes of ostrich feathering, each separate frond curling up at the end.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST SPECIFIC.
CHARLES FORDE'S

This discovery is revolutionising all the present methods of treatment for digestive ailments. The old theory of peptic, bismuth, starving, purging, etc., etc., is to be done away with. This great vegetable substance is compounded with other ingredients to facilitate the working, and possesses the peculiar properties of acting on the bowels without purging or otherwise weakening the patient. This is because the substance that relaxes the bowels has about the same action as the natural bile. BILE BEANS are purely vegetable, and a course of them will probably successfully oust the most chronic cases of Liver and Stomach Troubles, all other ailments that owe their origin to defective bile flow, assimilation, and digestion. These Beans are placed on the market in such a form that anyone can take them without medical supervision, and as the price is so very low, there are few homes that cannot afford to always have a box on the shelf for emergency.

CHARLES FORDE'S BILE BEANS FOR BILIOUSNESS are a certain cure for Indigestion, Biliousness, Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Rheumatism, Liver and Kidney Disorder, Constipation, Sleeplessness, Headache, Drowsiness, Anemia, and all Female Ailments. THE REAL YELLOW PERIL.

We encounter such a great deal of alarmist writings in the Home papers about the Yellow Peril, that it is rather refreshing to find, occasionally, some journal or other calling its readers' attention to that wider aspect of the question to which we have referred more than once in these columns. We allude to the marvellous industrial development that has made itself manifest of recent years in China and the celerity with which the Chinese nation are following the example set by Japan in adapting to their domestic needs all that Western civilisation has to offer them in the way of modern improvements in manufacturing methods. It is not necessary to go beyond the bounds of our own Colony to see abundant evidences of this momentous movement and of Chinese reciprocity of ideas hitherto considered to be entirely foreign and inimical to their national genius. Across the Harbour we have the spectacle of a new industrial town springing into existence. In Yau-mati and Lai-chikok districts, new factories continue to crop up like mushrooms. Where, a few years ago,

was nothing but sterile foreshore,
there is now a veritable hive of industry. And be it borne in mind, these factories, though small, are equipped with machinery and appliances of the latest Western type. Formerly it was said of Hongkong that it was a non-producing Colony. The same approach cannot be cast at us now.
To enumerate a few, we have at the present moment in the Colony factories producing great quantities of boots and shoes,
matches, glass, and textile goods of all descriptions. And that which we see in Yau-mati on a small scale is but a miniature representation of what is going on in China in general. Perhaps the first machine industry of any importance established in China
was in connection with textiles.
Under European auspices, spinning and weaving factories were put up, and after the inevitable difficulties had been overcome
in the way of training operatives entirely unaccustomed to the work, the department proved sufficiently successful to justify extension. Now there are quite a number of such factories scattered over the country—some still owned entirely by Europeans, a few by Japanese, but an increasingly large number by the Chinese themselves. It appears as though it were only a question of time for the whole of this vast industry to be taken over by the Chinese, and for the remaining British proprietors to beat as graceful a retreat as possible. In the matter of machinery, too, the Imperial Government have been very keen in the establishment of factories to produce not only small arms but guns of big calibre, and to build their own steam engines as well. If they can do this, it follows that even at the present time it would be quite possible for the Chinese,
should they take it into their heads, to manufacture very good and saleable bicycles and put them on the European market at prices which no manufacturer there could touch. It is not the possibility of the over-running of Europe by a countless horde of well-armed Chinese that constitutes the Yellow Peril. The peril of to-day is not the Chinaman as the man behind the gun but the Chinaman as the manufacturer of the gun and of many other things equally calling for the highest technical skill—the Chinaman, in short, who may in the future
compete with the European manufacturer on his own ground and undersell him in the markets of the world.

THE NEW BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

London, Feb. 3.—At a mass meeting of members of the party,
the British Labourites have agreed by a big majority to abolish the hitherto existing rule of the party requiring Labour Members of Parliament to conclude a certain agreement with the headquarters of the party, regarding their attitude in Parliament. The abolition of this rule is generally considered a proof of the submission of the Labourites to the Liberal party.
According to current rumours,
the Liberals advised the Labourites that if the latter desired the cancellation of the Osborne judgment they must alter the existing rule of their party referred to above.—Mainichi.

An enjoyable concert was given on Monday night at the Seamen's Institute in aid of St. Peter's Church Renovation Fund. The hall was crowded. The band of S. M. S. Schornhorst took a principal part in the concert and opened the programme with three selections, including "Love Me and the World is Mine." An encore was demanded, and a fourth selection was played. The following ladies and gentlemen also took part:—Mrs. Francis Clark, Messrs. Earle, Mitchell, Fitzsimmons, and Holman. Last night's concert was one of the best given at the Seamen's Institute.

With reference to the establishment of a German machinery export syndicate for the organisation and extension of the export trade in machinery to the Far East and the establishment by the syndicate of a central technical and commercial office at Shanghai,
H.M. Consul-General at Hongkong
(Sir W. Ward, K.C.M.G., C.V.O.)
reports that a definite agreement to this effect was signed at Berlin on Dec. 5 by the 20 firms forming the syndicate. None of the firms are competitors with one another, the various branches of the machinery industry being represented in the syndicate each by one firm only.

Stewards in charge of the Scale:
—The Hon. Mr. Henry Kewick
and Mr. G. Friesland.

Handicapper.—Capt. G. C.
Dwyer.

Judge.—The Hon. Sir Paul
Chater, Kt., C.M.G.

Assistant Judge.—Mr. C. H.
Ross.

Starter.—Mr. H. J. Gedge.

Second Starter.—Mr. M. W.
Slade.

Time Keeper.—Mr. M. S.
Sassoon.

Hon. Treasurer.—Mr. R. C.
Edwards.

Clerk of the Course.—Mr. T.
F. Hough.

The one untoward incident marrying the pleasures of the opening day's racing was the accident (as briefly reported last evening) which unfortunately befell Mr. G. W. Gegg in the last race of the day, when that popular jockey and keen sportsman was accidentally jolted off his seat in the saddle by the ponies cannon-ing as the large field raced all in a bunch for the first time past
the Judge's Box in the mile event.
Mr. Gegg was violently thrown to the ground a little beyond the bridge. He managed to pick himself up and even to take a couple of steps when his right foot could sustain him no longer
and he dropped to the ground again. With considerable presence of mind and before assistance could arrive Mr. Gegg managed to drag himself to a side of the course in order to keep it clear for the ponies finishing in the race. Surgical assistance was at once available and, fortunately,
Mr. Gegg's injuries were pronounced not of a serious character.
He was removed in an ambulance to hospital for treatment. Our inquiries to-day elicited the agreeable information that Mr. Gegg was progressing as well as it may be expected in the circumstances.

The meeting was continued today, and again perfect weather helped to make the second day's racing one of complete success.
The same large, orderly crowd of spectators gathered within and without the green and the private stands and booths held their usual number of thousands of patrons.

In the enclosure itself the animated scene of hundreds of ladies in their daintily got up costumes and fashionable headgear was one which has ever been associated with the great annual carnival in the Colony, and this year's tout ensemble does not at all suffer by comparison with the picturesqueness of the Valley on such occasions in the past.

As yesterday, Their Excellencies
Sir Frederick and Lady Jagard arrived before the opening of the race and were escorted by Capt.
Taylor and Simson. The official party were received on arrival by Sir Paul Chater and Mr. T. F.
Hough, the clerk of the course,
on behalf of the stewards.

Thanks to the latter no detail was too unimportant to allow of its being neglected and so the elaborate scheme of arrangements
for the comfort of the visitors
and the proper and efficient conduct of the races was carried out without so much as a single hitch.
Thanks, also, to the hard working and energetic clerk of the course, the course was in capital condition, contributing to several splendid records being broken
this year.

The Band of the K.O.Y.L.I.
was again in attendance, and the programme of music which it discussed throughout the day
lent charm to the entire proceedings.

To-day was

DERBY DAY.

As ever the honour of winning the classic event of the meeting is keenly discussed and the sports-manlike rivalry which prevails
imparts to the contest a zest,
making the winning of the victory all the more greatly coveted.
From an early stage of the training season favours were shared between Mr. F. B. Marshall's

Willow Tree and Mr. Buxey's Coronation Rose, and after the results of the races for Maiden Stakes and Trial Plate yesterday
the outcome of the race for the Derby became even more speculative. And thus it was that greater interest than ever centered in the main event of the day. As to that more anon.

The first race on the cards today was

THE JOCKEY CUP.

It was confined to jockeys who have not had a winning mount.
Fourteen ponies faced the starters,
and on the merits of the mounts
Tomahawk was tipped to win.
Kerry secured the Judge's verdict
at the finish. The Exchange Plate was not productive of any keen contest, the race being won by Cecile Rose who secured first place from Blackmore Vale, Just in Sport being third. After this race came

THE HONGKONG DERBY.

Five ponies started. We give below the betting on each of the respective contestants:—

	To win.	Places
Coronation Rose	872	676
Willow Tree	124	280
Auchendoon	307	356
Apple Tree	29	60
Just in Time	30	75

From the foregoing figures it will be seen that Coronation Rose started the strongest favourite.
After the jockeys had weighed out, the spectators watched with intense excitement the arrival of the ponies. Willow Tree led all the way until the last quarter
when the race for the blue ribbon of the meeting resolved itself into a splendid struggle between Auchendoon (John Peel's) and Coronation Rose (Buxey's).
Honours were captured by Sir Hormusjee's representative who established another Derby record in the splendid time of 3m. 09 secs. The veteran sportsman and his jockey (Mr. Burkill) were applauded and cheered by the crowd as Sir Hormusjee led Coronation Rose into the weighing stand. Mr. Johnstone (Auchendoon's rider) also received a very popular ovation.

The German Cup was won comparatively easily by Tarf, Mr.
Burkill up.

found below:—

$ 2lb. overweight.

There were fourteen starters.
Kerry had the best of a poor start, but Mr. Hickman allowed The Ramp to rush ahead at the bridge followed by Indragiri Chief. Tomahawk was right away back in the bunch. The Ramp surrendered the lead to Shellout
at the Football Stand where Kerry and Tomahawk also rushed to the front. Nearing the Rock Shell-out was in the van, but the excursion's pace was too hot for him and at the bend the race lay between Kerry and Tomahawk.
Hickman's mount had the rails
and Kremor the outside course.
Both applied the whip vigorously
and Kerry won by half a length.
Shellout was a good third.
Time: 1.50.

The start was a good one.
Cecile Rose led the way for Just in Sport, and Blackmore Vale and Cherry Tree kept in close company together. The same order was maintained, passing the Grand Stand, on to the straight round the Golf Club bend and the Football Stand. At the bottom of the hill, Cherry Tree made an effort to close with the leaders and he and Blackmore Vale reduced the distance between them and Cecile Rose. The latter was still leading passing the rock, but he was overhauled by Just in Sport for the next furlong.
Cherry Tree being third and Blackmore Vale fourth. Rose soon regained his leadership and Cherry Tree and Just in Sport
lost their positions successively to Blackmore Vale. A capital race ensued in the home straight and Cecile Rose beat Johnstone's mount at the post by a short length.

3.—The Hongkong Derby.—A sweepstakes of $20 each with $2,000 added. For China ponies, bona fide griffins, on date of entry. First pony to receive 70 per cent.; second 20 per cent.; and third 10 per cent. Weight for inches as per scale. One mile and a half.

Mr. Durgor's Just in Time,
11st. 11lb. (Cumming) 0
Mr. F. B. Marshall's Apple
Tree, 11st. 11lb. (King) 0

Five ponies faced the starter.
Coronation Rose carried the heaviest number of backers.
Apple Tree's jockey wore a white cap. Willow Tree was the first to show on the field and was led to the starting post. Coronation Rose trotted past the members stand as far as the village and Mr. Burkill sent him on a short,
sharp sprint to the back stretch.
Auchendoon was by the mafoe
a short distance from the bridge.
Apple Tree followed and Just in Time was the last to put in an appearance. After one false start when Auchendoon and Coronation Rose ran away, the starters sent the field away on level terms.
Willow Tree settled down in front of Coronation Rose second. Au-chendoon third, Just in Time fourth and Apple Tree fifth. The last two exchanged places on emerging from the Rock. The first time past the spectators' stand
the order was:—Willow Tree,
Just in Time, Apple Tree, Coronation Rose and Auchendoon, all the jockeys riding easy. The order was maintained in the back stretch. At the 3-4 mile post Johnstone gave Auchendoon the reins and the black pony at once rushed to fourth place and still keeping on the outside he moved into third place. By the time the Football Stand was reached Auchendoon had got into second place with Coronation Rose on his heels in the third, Apple Tree
fourth and Just in Time fifth.
Willow Tree leading in the van.

The two favourites were going at a terrific pace and Mr. Marshall's selected was steadily losing his advantage; he had a bare length lead
only when coming out of the rock, Auchendoon being second from Coronation Rose by half a length, two lengths separating him from Apple Tree and Just in Time now completely out of the race. Rounding the Village bend, Willow Tree's chances faded before Au-chendoon and Coronation Rose who took his first and second places in turn. Mr. Burkill piloted his mount along the rails and hugging the position of vantage raced home with Auchendoon on the outside. Both riders used the whip freely and the race
looked like either's until Coronation Rose assumed the lead by a clear length when Mr. Burkill sure of the race rode past the winning post victorious by a length
from Auchendoon second, Willow Tree third, Apple Tree fourth and Just in Time last. The race was run in record
Time: 3.09.

Ten ponies started. Wirral secured a big advantage at the start and soon made the pace a rapid one for the rest of the ponies,
all being in a bunch together.
The two best fancied—Mustard and Tarf—were lying behind in the fifth and sixth positions, but moved up at the foot of the incline to the rock. Wirral lost his long lead at the rock to Artesian who was leading on entering the village. Burkill moved Tarf on to the outside course and overhauled the leader
into the home straight, Mustard
being third from Artesian. Tarf won with a length to spare.
Mustard second and Artesian

SHANGHAI'S COMMERCIAL MORALITY.

The remarks of our Chief Justice, Sir Havilland de Sausmarez, at the Supreme Court yesterday, with regard to a growing laxity in Shanghai commercial transactions and life, are being in some quarters adversely criticised. The utterance is one, coming from the source from which it does, which cannot be ignored. Let it not be imagined that Shanghai was ever the abode of an entirely unsullied assemblage of pious saints. It was never anything of the kind. No commercial community ever was. But the record stands, secure and unassailable, that the real Shanghai, of business as of society, and apart from its inevitable parasitic attachments, was one whose character would bear the closest scrutiny, and whose boast it was that written contracts were unnecessary where every man's word was as good as his bond. That this was true of the Chinese merchant community as well as of the British and others has been acknowledged many times. Old Shanghai residents have gone home after spending the best of their years here, and have borne testimony to the strict integrity of the best type of native merchant. Mr. (afterwards Sir Ewen) Cameron, for so many years Manager of the local branch of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, declared on his departure that he had never once been deceived by a native whom he had trusted. There is no need to pile a Pelion of proof on this Oss of fact. The Shanghai of to-day may take it for granted that the general tone of this community in the past was one of sterling integrity. If it had not been so neither the character of the place nor its material position could have been what it was, or what it is.

As this enviable character has been lost, or is it in danger of being lost? That is the question suggested by the strictures of the Chief Justice. We need not enlarge on the seriousness of it. It cuts at the very root of our character and life. Neither can we venture to speak ex cathedra and either affirm or deny in tones of editorial infallibility. We can but state our belief, and that is briefly this, that the great heart of the community is just as anxious for the honour of its good name, just as determined to follow the old path of probity, rectitude, and virtue as ever it was. At the same time it must be admitted that within the past score of years, and especially during the last half of that time, the foreign community here has changed enormously, and it is possible that there has been a greater proportional influx of that undesirable, yet inevitable, parasitic section which is to be found in all great cities. We need not dwell on "the dire effects of that speculation on which so many will point a moral." The Chief Justice said that there is "a fatal inclination in this society here to slur over any lapse from commercial uprightness." With this we cannot agree. That inclination may be, with a few—a very few. In dealing with the question of the commercial morality of Shanghai Sir Havilland de Sausmarez should remember that he is making those remarks on an international community, and not only the subjects of his own nation. Shanghai, as a commercial community, although it has been referred to as "a sink of iniquity," has never been stigmatised as immoral commercially. There are no doubt black sheep amongst the flock, but they are few and far between. Shanghai certainly did lose its head somewhat during the rubber boom, and there were perhaps not a few shady tricks perpetrated, but we do not think these were symptomatic of the commercial morals of the community. Sir Havilland also says: "In a community such as this (Shanghai), which exists mainly for the purpose of trade in a foreign land, I cannot but feel that such neglect of respect for commercial uprightness must have a very serious effect upon those with whom we live, in their estimation of our character as a commercial nation and of the faith which ought to be placed upon upright merchants carrying on trade in a country such as this." It would seem from these remarks that Sir Havilland saddles the whole commercial community with this commercial neglect, but we do not think that he really means this. Had he emphasized that such conduct as the prisoner was guilty of had a very serious effect, we should agree with him, but we must deny that our community as a whole should be blamed for the fault of one or a few. We suggested months ago that Shanghai should boldly grapple with the special evil of share-gambling, and we hope that it will yet be done. As to the honesty of our business community as a whole and the integrity of our people as a rule, we have no suspicion whatever. What is wanted is such a purging as shall get rid of a poison which threatens to spread. There may be some little difficulty in bringing it about, but it should be done, for there are some microbes more dangerous than those of pneumonia.

There is another matter on which Sir Havilland, and that is the extent to which the prisoner held ought to have deterred him from committing such a crime as he was accused of and pleaded guilty to. A man in his position ought to have known better. Had he been a poor, ignorant man, that might have been some excuse, but the services to the community referred to by the Judge were no reason for the clemency shown, and it is doubtful whether the sentence passed on the prisoner will be likely to deter such crimes being committed in the future. — "Shanghai Mercury."

Craig & Co. The consideration was Singapore, $300,000. That was the arrangement between Dr. Nijhuis and accused. The next agreement was dated April 5, and was between Craig & Co. and the Siak Indrapoera Rubber Concessions, Ltd. The consideration in this agreement was to be Singapore $100,000, Tls. 40,000 in cash, and the allotment of 45,000 shares of Tls. 10 each to Craig & Co. or their nominees. What that meant as between accused and Pitts was that Tls. 20,000 would be paid to each of them, and ten thousand shares would go to Lind and Pitts, and ten thousand to accused. These were the considerable sums of money and the many millions in the indictment. Next it was counsel's duty to refer to a question which would have been dealt with under the heading of motive or the reason for the commission of this misdemeanour with which accused was charged. The date of incorporation of the Siak Company was March 29, 1910. Shares were issued to the general public on April 13 and 14. But the settlement between Craig and Co. (the vendors) and the Company, was not made until May 16. The question of the delay had now to be dealt with. About this time many rubber companies were floated in Shanghai and unfortunately, Shanghai entirely lost its head. So far as counsel knew there were not any persons who were wise, except those who had the one wisdom not to deal in shares at all. During that time it was not necessary even for a company to be incorporated before its shares were being talked about and dealt in. He had known instances himself where the very document on which people applied for shares, and said that they wished to have them, without knowing whether they were going to let them, was dealt with as if it were scrip. These matters were common knowledge. As to the documents in this case, it was necessary to refer to the state of the share market as communicated between the parties, and as it might have been taken to have influenced their action. In a letter from Pitts to Dr. Nijhuis, dated April 11, he said "the market is not so good as it was when you left, and I do not consider it will hold good much longer." In a letter dated April 14 also from Pitts to Dr. Nijhuis, Pitts wrote "the share market is not so good now as when you were here, and has decreased considerably during this last week." On May 5 Pitts wrote "at the present time the Shanghai market has practically collapsed, and there is some difficulty in obtaining subscriptions for new companies... as they are getting tired of rubber, which has been, as I predicted, overdone." Then there was the telegram of April 11 from Pitts to Dr. Nijhuis, referred to in the letter of the same date "net promptly, or the opportunity will be gone." On April 28 Pitts wrote that the share market was very weak. Counsel need not say any more than that on this question of possible motive. The overt acts which were gone into in the lower Court were those in connexion with the sending of a telegram supposed to be from one Franken, and therefore likely to influence the minds of the directors who were at that time doubtful whether they should or should not carry out part of the agreement that referred to handing over the money and shares to the vendors. All the letters from which counsel had quoted passages regarding the state of the share market were signed by Pitts. As regards the report on the estates, it was suggested in the first document to which Counsel had referred that the purchase price should be 5 per cent. less than the independent valuation. It was also referred to again in the first letter from Dr. Nijhuis to Messrs. Lind and Pitts. There was no valuation whatever in the report of Mr. Van Hengst. On March 23, Mr. Liddell, a Director of the Siak Company, which had then been formed, wrote a letter to accused which read as follows: March 23, 1910.

My dear Craig:—The informal meeting of the Provisional Directors held in your office last evening when you introduced us to Dr. Nijhuis, the owner and vendor of the Estate, was most interesting, and if the by-products of the Estate are anything like what they are represented to be, you certainly have acquired a fine property. The reports we read from the Dutch Resident addressed to your Singapore lawyers, and that of Mr. A. Van Hengst are of course reliable and conscientious, but from a Director's point of view, I am of opinion that in the interests of our Shareholders, we should immediately obtain a report from some independent Expert of high reputation at Singapore. I think you will agree with me that it is a reasonable and sound thing for the Directors to do, and it only remains for you to suggest how this can best be accomplished.

Yours sincerely
(Sgd.) John Liddell.

To this accused replied:

Shanghai, March 23, 1910.

My dear Liddell:—Many thanks for your letter of this date. I think your suggestion is excellent—that we have an independent report made as soon as possible—and so soon as the directors meet officially your suggestion should be acted upon. After all, we are all liable to be "taken in," and for one, shall be only too anxious to have some one we can rely upon, to make a report upon this property.

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) H. J. Craig.

On March 30, at the very first meeting of the Board of Directors, there was a Minute which showed that they had come to the following conclusion:

"Letters written by Craig and Co. to Hengst, Dr. Nijhuis, Donaldson and Burkinshaw, the 24th instant were placed before the Directors, and after a long discussion it was decided that the Secretaries should cable to Donaldson and Burkinshaw as soon as the letter of this firm arrives and request them to procure an expert to go to the Siak estates and make an independent report upon them, and to ask Donaldson and Burkinshaw to cable the company the results as soon as his report is made." The Directors naturally supposed that that was done. Donaldson and Burkinshaw were the Company's lawyers at Singapore. The Directors not hearing anything about the report from time to time made inquiries, and no report was forthcoming. The documents in this case had been gone through with great care, and neither counsel nor his learned friend could find any letter, telegram or any other document showing that any attempt had been made by the Secretaries of the Siak Indrapoera Concessions, Messrs. Craig and Co., to obtain this report. After that meeting written instructions were given to Dr. Nijhuis, who was then in Shanghai, to do certain things on behalf of the Company, and although Mr. Liddell's letter had been written and replied to the day before, there was no mention of the independent report in Dr. Nijhuis' instructions. There could therefore be no question about Dr. Nijhuis getting the report. There was no mention of any report in these letters sent South, and they had been unable to find any instructions in regard to it, sent to anyone. After the trouble arose a report was obtained from Mr. Mackenzie, and that report was highly unfavourable. That report was brought to the notice of Dr. Nijhuis on August 23, 1910.

Counsel now came to the exhibits which dealt with the particular telegram which was laid before his fellow directors by the accused.

His Lordship—Will you look at Exhibit thirteen please, and tell me who signed it?

The Crown Advocate—The signature is almost illegible. It is dated November 1909, and signed by the Assistant Resident at Bongkales, Mr. Van Hengst. This is the document referred to in the letter of February 25 from Dr. Nijhuis to Mr. Mc Lellan and Lind and Pitts.

His Lordship—I asked because the signature looks like Franken.

The Crown Advocate, continuing, said that with regard to the particular telegram which had led to this case, there was a telegram dated May 11, 1910, which was put in, in the lower Court, in various copies. There was the original as received by Dr. Nijhuis at Medan, there was a certified copy from the Cable office, and there was a draft in the handwriting of accused himself, with a note by Pitts, that he received it from the accused. Exhibit 10 of the exhibits put in, in the lower Court, was a memo on Craig & Co.'s office paper, of a copy of a telegram received by Craig and Co., Ltd., at 5.30 p.m. on 12-5-10, from G. J. Nijhuis. It was only necessary for counsel to refer to that. Defendant was aware when he told the directors that this telegram came from Franken, that it was another telegram, and not the one he wanted to be sent, which showed clearly that this telegram came from Dr. Nijhuis, and not from Franken at all.

In a letter to the directors from Craig & Co., dated the 13th, they stated "we have received a further cable from Franken, the nominee of Donaldson and Burkinshaw, dated yesterday from Medan." The Minute book of the Directors also contained the following entry:—"A telegram received from Mr. Franken, nominee of Donaldson and Burkinshaw, was placed upon the table, and informed the secretaries that without doubt Mr. Van Hengst's report of the Siak estates was of the greatest value." On May 13 Mr. Craig replied to Dr. Nijhuis on the subject of the mining rights, and this disposed of the conclusion which at one time it was attempted to set up, that the telegram just read was not from Nijhuis, but meant that Nijhuis' consent must be obtained. This claim was also negatived by the entry on accused's own office paper, that the telegram was from Nijhuis, and subsequent confirmations from accused and Pitts.

The incriminating telegram asking Dr. Nijhuis to telegraph certain statements without using his own name, was sent away by Pitts at 3.55 p.m. on May 11. An innocent telegram, referring to the question of engaging managers, was dispatched at 3 p.m. the same day by accused.

His Lordship—Perhaps you had better read the telegrams.

The Crown Advocate read the cable in question which referred to Dr. Nijhuis to accused's letter of March 24, and asked him whether he had arranged for managers. He was to telegraph as soon as possible what had been done as the Directors were anxious to have everything arranged satisfactorily as promptly as possible. That telegram and the incriminating telegram, were received by Dr. Nijhuis at Medan the following day, and among the exhibits they found that accused had been informed by Pitts that Dr. Nijhuis was at Medan, because it was to Pitts that he telegraphed his movements. The incriminating telegram read as follows: (in code) "have not yet received report confirming particulars prospecting Siak Indrapoera from estate to satisfy directors everything is in order before vendors (we) can receive payment and for your private information only please telegraph as follows with our name as sender: Craig and Co., Ltd., Siak Indrapoera have inspected estate for good condition."

tion, acreage cultivation 700, I give estimate 62,000, growth soil good planted area fairly clean, I cannot give estimate Getah Balam trees, I think full reliance can be placed upon estimate of Van Hengst, I consider the property of great value, Franken."

That telegram might be divided into two parts. First there was the recital of the attitude of the directors towards the completion of the company's affairs.

There was a reason given why the telegram should be sent, namely to get over this difficulty, and a pretty full recital before the message which was to be sent was reached. As counsel had already mentioned he had been unable to find anything in the correspondence to show that the report had been asked for. There was nothing in the correspondence between Pitts and accused, and Dr. Nijhuis to show that they could have expected or thought that a report was coming. Both the innocent and the incriminating telegram arrived at Medan on May 12. Both were dealt with by Dr. Nijhuis.

He replied to the incriminating telegram "I am very sorry your instructions cannot be carried out." That telegram was not sent to Pitts but to Craig and Co. That was the answer to the telegram signed Franken. To the innocent telegram Dr. Nijhuis replied as follows: "There is no doubt about it the report of Van Hengst Siak Indrapoera of great value. Resident (he) has allowed preference two months' mining rights prospecting 250,000 hectares of land total expenses amount about Rupees (Guineas) 750, must have consent of Nijhuis."

That was the telegram that accused placed before the Directors as having come from Franken. The desired reply not having been sent this telegram was used for the same purpose as the other telegram would have been used, and placed before the Directors as a telegram from Franken. Although that telegram was placed before the Directors as a telegram from Franken, the acknowledgment showed that they knew in Shanghai that it came from Dr. Nijhuis himself and not from Franken. In reply to that telegram accused cabled to Dr. Nijhuis "Mining rights, I will agree. Please obtain on behalf of Company. Awaiting reply to our telegram of May 11 with regard to managers."

The Franken telegram placed before the Directors read as though the mining rights were in the hands of Dr. Nijhuis, from whom they could be got, whereas the acknowledgment of this telegram in regard to mining rights was direct from accused to Dr. Nijhuis. In the letters of accused to Dr. Nijhuis confirming telegrams sent and received it was of interest that although copies of all other telegrams of the same period were given, no reference was made to any telegram of his own, or others sent on May 11. In the letter of May 28 was a confirmation of the telegram regarding the managers. The case for the Crown in the lower Court, the case for which accused had had the grace to save the time of this Court, was not that he conspired to obtain money which might never have been due to him, but that he conspired with Pitts—the Directors then being somewhat anxious as regards the estate and the receipt of the report—to conspire with Pitts at that moment to have a telegram of this sort arranged for, which would hasten and make sure the completion of this agreement, and the payment to him and to Pitts of the money and shares which they might not otherwise have obtained. It was not a conspiracy to put off on the Directors an estate which might or might not prove remunerative, but with reckless criminality, regardless of whether there might be a good report or a bad one, he sought to hasten the completion of the agreement. Accused probably thought that the estate would turn out to be a good one. It was not the case for the Crown whether he did or did not think that. The case for the Crown was that he conspired with Pitts, to see that they got their money and shares. His Lordship knew the state of rubber shares at that time. Accused quite understood, and knew the state of the share market. Pitts also knew it quite well. Counsel had looked through all these documents, and after looking through all the genuine documents in the case he could find no reason to suppose that accused was less guilty than Pitts, or that Pitts was more guilty than accused. It was a natural weakness, perhaps, to hold the absent more guilty than the present person who was present. But counsel had been unable to find anything to show that one was more or less guilty than the other.

The facts brought forward by the Crown were documentary facts. His learned friend would say anything that could be said on accused's behalf. But it was his duty to say this on behalf of accused. He came here after a strenuous life elsewhere, a life that was mostly an open-air life. He was not a man of great education. He came here when Shanghai was on the boom. Since then, in various ways, he had been a very successful man. He lived in a society which while concealing its deeper feelings of right and wrong unfortunately, on its outer surface, worshipped success. Last year like the rest of Shanghai he tried to be successful by any means and whatever means he could. It was a very strong temptation. Accused was a man of broad standards. He was a fine large, hearty and healthy man for an open-air life. Unfortunately, he was very successful, shortly after he came here. And the temptation to consider success, and whatever was necessary to obtain success justified, led him to do what he did.

Mr. Macleod said that he appeared on behalf of the man who had found it necessary to come before His Lordship and on being charged with committing an offence against the laws of his country, to admit that he had done so. He thought that any man in that position was entitled to a certain amount of sympathy and, for his pleading, respect. It was not his client's wish or his own intention to belittle the offence that the defendant had committed, or to enter into a number of excuses for him or for what he had done. The Crown Advocate had also mentioned this, that this was a conspiracy in which he had not been able to find that Mr. Craig was a dupe or that the other man was more responsible. Pitts not being in Shanghai, it was not the intention of his client or himself to suggest anything for any share of the blame. However, it was necessary, and counsel felt it his duty, to place the matter before his Lordship so that he should understand and appreciate the circumstances which led to the sending of this telegram which was the offence. His Lordship had heard most of the details from the Crown Advocate and it was with only one part of those details that counsel wished to deal. Mr. Wilkinson had already made it clear that he did not suggest that Mr. Craig was trying to get something he might not otherwise have got. Counsel thought that he was entitled to put it to his Lordship more strongly than that, that he was at that time endeavouring to get shares and money to which in law he was entitled. His Lordship could see from the agreement that so soon as the estates were transferred to the Dutch Company and so soon as the shares in the Dutch Company were transferred to the Siak Company, the vendors, Messrs. Craig & Co., Ltd. were entitled to receive the balance of the purchase price payable. It was also clear from the minutes that the Directors had been advised that so soon as they heard that the estates had been transferred, and the shares of the Dutch Company had been transferred, they were in law bound to pay Craig & Co., Ltd. That was the state of the rights of the parties at the time this circular containing the false telegram was circulated. It was very true that the Directors were very desirous of having an independent report. It was also true that they had inquired for it, and it was clear from the evidence of Dr. Marshall that this telegram which was represented to have come from Franken had very largely influenced his mind in giving the vendor his shares and the balance of the cash. In law, according to the agreement, the Company was liable to hand that money and the shares to the vendors. There was no attempt on the part of Mr. Craig to obtain what was not his. Counsel suggested that it would be absurd to raise any suspicion of that, because Mr. Craig was bound to be found out. If he tried to get these shares on that date instead of a later date he was bound to be found out and to be brought to account for it. A report was made by Mr. Mackenzie. For that report his client was, to a certain extent, responsible. They had already had another report which made it clear that the estate was not of that value. When the report was received and it was confirmed by another report saying that the property was nothing like of the value, everyone thought in March and April, Mr. Craig made an offer to the Directors to return in cash or the equivalent in shares at the par value, Tls. 120,000, which from the figures the Crown Advocate had given his Lordship he would see was the price payable. That offer having been made after certain expenses had been paid, was actually the whole of his profit on the transaction. Counsel submitted that this showed the attitude of his client with regard to the sending of this telegram.

His Lordship asked if the Crown Advocate had checked these figures. It was very material.

Mr. Macleod—Tls. 20,000 and 10,000 shares of Tls. 10 each.

Mr. Wilkinson said that Mr. Craig did at one time make an offer. He agreed that Mr. Craig did make an offer to pay back a considerable amount to the Company if that would close the matter. He certainly did do that.

Mr. Macleod continued that the only objection that could be made was that the shares at that time were below par at market value. Mr. Craig offered to pay Tls. 120,000, or the equivalent in shares at par. What he was offering to return, in effect, was more than the profit he himself had received. Counsel thought that that showed that his client's intention at the time that he committed or took part in the commission of this offence was not to obtain something to which he was not entitled, or to defraud anyone. But his intention was, as the Crown Advocate had put it, to obtain his share of the profit as soon as possible at that time. Mr. Wilkinson had referred to the rubber boom and the fact that it might have been very important for Mr. Craig to get the shares at that time. It was unnecessary for him to go into the question whether his client had previously sold shares. It would be enough and sufficient for counsel that shares were falling in price and Mr. Craig would be naturally desirous of realizing some part of that and at a time when the shares would be worth more. That included all the details and surrounding circumstances that he thought it necessary to put before his Lordship. The rest that counsel desired to say directly concerned what his client had undergone, his position generally, and certain aspects of the offence and what had taken place since. He submitted, and he thought his Lordship would agree with him that it must be so, that from August until now, that from the time that his client heard of the receipt of Mr. Mackenzie's report that the estate was very much less valuable, his client had undergone a great deal.

His Lordship said that Mr. Macleod had stated that prisoner was responsible for getting Mr. Mackenzie's report.

FOOTBALL.

NAVY LEAGUE COMPETITION.

The H.M.S. Monmouth football team met the H.M.S. Flora representatives in the big ships' league competition on the Naval Ground at Happy Valley.

There was very little to choose between the teams, and after a fine display of football the first half ended in a score being registered. The second half was also of a fast character, and soon after resuming the Monmouth forwards made a beautiful run down and scored the first and only goal of the game. After this goal the game became exciting, and the Flora men made many attempts to equalise, with no result. The Monmouth forwards then made another rush down with the hopes of scoring a second goal, and this resulted in a win for the Monmouth by one goal to nil.

"WHY I AM A BACHELOR."

REASONS FOR NOT GETTING MARRIED.

The great decrease in marriages during recent years has been a source of considerable controversy among all classes of the community. Many people declare that to the ambitious young man a wife is a serious handicap to his career; whilst, on the other hand, many famous men have declared, and are still declaring, that they owe much of their success in life to the help and encouragement of their better halves.

With a view to obtaining some solution of this vexed question, we have approached a number of hardened bachelors in order to obtain their reasons for not entering into matrimony (says a London paper).

By far the largest number of our informants stated that they were bachelors because they were unable to afford the expense of keeping a wife and home.

"Girls nowadays," said one disconsolate bachelor, "think that men marry them especially to let them spend their money on themselves. They expect two or three servants to do all the housework and cooking, and consider even a little dusting quite beneath them. They hand their children over to the care of nurses, spend most of their time trying on new hats and dresses, or giving tea and dinner parties to their lady friends."

"It is not that I begrudge a wife my money, exactly, but if she is always going to be wrapt up with her own pleasures and amusements, what is the good of marrying her?"

"I do not intend to marry," said another prosperous-looking bachelor, "until I have sufficient income to give a wife a first-rate time. She must have dresses, theatre tickets, motors, and all the pretty things so dear to the heart of a woman. I think a wife ought to be treated just like a doll, and given everything she wants, and until I can afford to do that I intend remaining single."

And this was a gentleman whose yearly income ran into four figures. The girl who obtains him as a husband should certainly have a good time.

One bachelor replied that he was so fond of the ladies that he could not bear the thought of being tied to one for life.

"I think if I lived with a woman year after year," he said, "I should so get to know her every characteristic and action that I should get heartily tired of her. Of course, I shall be told that if I really loved a woman this could never be, but I doubt if the greatest and strongest love which the modern man and woman have between them is proof against the deadly monotony, which comes after the newness of married life has worn off."

One wealthy bachelor who is the despair of numerous match-making mothers, when asked why he did not marry, replied:

"I am a bachelor because I can never feel sure that a woman will marry me for myself alone, and not for my money. Some years back I was actually engaged to a young lady, whom I thought really loved me, but just to test her genuineness I adopted the simple experiment of one day explaining to her that I had suddenly lost all my fortune in a bank smash."

"A day or so later she calmly threw me over, remarking that love in a cottage might suit some people, but it wouldn't suit her. Since then I have lost faith in womanhood, so have determined to leave them severely alone."

A veteran of 40 years or more, who has preached the doctrine of single bliss all his life, gave an interesting if selfish reason for doing so:

"Most of my friends are bachelors, and we have such good times together. If I married I should have to give up my club life, and consequently my friends, and I have not yet met the woman who appears to me sufficiently to make me sacrifice my present life for that of the home. I much prefer to have independent views of my own, and complete freedom in my actions, than to being more or less the slave of one's family, as most married men of my acquaintance seem to be."

A somewhat similar reply was given by a young bachelor of 25:

"I prefer to have plenty of money to spend, and a good time generally, than to be married," he said. "If I were a married man, my hard-earned money would have to go on keeping up a household and family, and I should have to live in a very different style from what I am doing now. I may be called selfish, but I have always been used to living luxuriously, and having plenty of smart clothes to wear, and I do not really think the much-praised advantages of home life would compensate me sufficiently to give these up."

In summing up our inquiries, it would appear that the majority of bachelors are unmarried owing to selfish reasons of their own, which are often excusable on the ground that the modern girl is twice as extravagant as was her grandmother.

But whatever difficulties bachelors may raise up to excuse themselves for remaining single there are really few who would not speedily find some means of overcoming them if the really right girl came along.

BRITISH STEAMER ROBBED.

[The "Telegraph" Correspondent.]

Canton, Feb. 13.

The British Consul on the Shanghai has written to the P. U. Magistrate to the effect that, while a certain British steamer was at anchor one night off Honam, Canton, four pirates boarded the vessel, and having gagged and bound the quartermaster, made off with a large booty. The British Consul requests the magistrate to have the stolen goods traced, and those connected with this outrage arrested and punished.

On receipt of the despatch from the Consul, the magistrate sent a deputy to investigate, who has so far not apprehended any of the robbers.

HAND-PAINTED BOOTS.

Decorated footwear has come as the natural consequence of short skirts. The Parisienne is delighting in this new opportunity for novelties, and begins to regard the plain, severe-looking boots as not at all up-to-date. Her boots now show uppers of soft suede, satin, or tinted kid, and have on them fantastic embroidery designs worked in silk; or else they show painted ornamentation which sometimes come right down on to the toe. Medallions of gold cloth, showing a painted scene, is another fancy, while a simpler design has a band of velvet round the top of the boot and down the fronts.

SHORTEST SURNAME.

A. M.S. Be, who carries on a business in Gray's Inn-road, London, probably rejoices in the shortest surname in London, but he has equals in brevity on the other side of the Atlantic. Canada's federal capital, Ottawa, was founded by a gentleman with a similarly curt surname, Colonel By. Its original name was Bytown. In Melbourne, Australia, there is or was a tradesman with the name "John Ny" over his door. And there is an up-country Australian township with only two letters in its name, but they are capital ones—"J. C." The pioneer settlers in the place found these initials carved in the bark of a tree, so, while the town grew, its little name remained.

It is some years since (says the "Chronicle") a Mr. Buggie wrote to the London papers asking for some easy way of escaping from the deadweight of names—like his own. Being an official in Doctor's Commons, he had gathered from the wills registered there a list of similarly unhappy surnames. Here are some of them:—Awe, Bub, Belly, Beast, Cheese, Col. Cockles, Duncie, Demon, Dan, Drinknill, Fatt, Funck, Froggo, Goose, Ginger, Ghost, Gimlet, Greedy, Hogg, Hump, Headche, Jug, Jelly, Kneebone, Kidney, Lenky, Lazy, Mug, Monkey, Pig-head, Poker, Radish, Rump, Rot-longnose, Snags, Swatte, Swine, Vittle.

The bookings of passengers to Australia for 1910 exceeded those for 1909 by 30 per cent.

WESTERNIZED CHINESE.

A quirk of a century ago, the apparition of a Chinese gentleman in complete western costume with well trimmed hair would have made frequenters of the Bund rub their eyes in astonishment. It is now so much an "inalterable" of every day occurrence that one hardly thinks twice about it. The recent queue cutting movement has added considerably to the number of westernized natives so far as outward appearance goes. It is a matter which may be looked at from various points of view. We propose to consider only those which seem to us most promising, dwelling but little on mere sartorial changes, which after all is but symbolical of something deeper, says the "Shanghai Mercury."

"Does a man differ from a dog," says a character in David Garrick, and the dictum cannot be gainsaid. Western dress is more workmanlike than that of the East. What it loses in picturesqueness, it gains in adaptability to bodily exertion and convenience. It is, moreover, a sort of common bond between the nations of the west, who choose to consider themselves the salt of the civilized earth. No westerner without long experience could feel himself thoroughly at home with an Asiatic in his eastern dress. It would take him an hour to feel friendly with one dressed as he himself is dressed, talking the language which he talks, and possessed of sufficient knowledge of the things he knows to be able to discuss reasonably the topics of the day. The great thing, therefore, in western dress is that it gives greater freedom to the wearer than the Chinese does, and it tends to break down the barrier between east and west in other ways.

Mentally, the westernized Chinese cannot fail to be head and shoulders above his compatriot, who has nothing but the ancient teaching for his intellectual outfit. The curse of a purely classical course is its lack of practicality, its worship of words, even sometimes, of the sound of words as distinct from their meaning, and its subservience to authority. One may imagine a steam engine, however much one may honour its inventor, but imagine the horror of a Chinese teacher if one of his pupils were to suggest an improvement of the Four Books. The westernized Chinese, too, is like his preceptors, many-sided. Nothing which the thought of man can fathom comes amiss to him. Every single faculty has received some culture, if the training has been as it should be. There will be an exactitude in it which scorches "Muskee" and "Can do." There is no "Cha-pah-tai" in geometrical or mathematical reasoning. Moreover, it is usually the case that the Westernized Chinese makes himself an expert in something. His previous training fits him for it. He has the "something of everything" as a basis, and on that he builds the "everything of something." One of the drawbacks of native training is that expertness, except in calligraphy, perhaps, is not cultivated, except amongst artisans, and with them it is apprenticeship and practice which make them what they are. Before many years are over we shall find China no longer sending abroad men of the type of her first representatives, knowing no tongue but their own. As with us, their diplomatists will begin their preparation of tongues in their boyhood, will perfect them by travel and life abroad, will make political affairs a serious study, and so will take their place in the diplomatic world as well equipped for their work as any of their foreign colleagues. So with men who take up professional work. Already there are Chinese doctors, electricians, and civil engineers who are respected by all foreigners, enjoying the privilege of their acquaintance, and the number will rapidly grow.

If we turn to the moral side of eastern nature, it is quite safe to say that when at its best, it has little to learn from the west. But custom and long-continued evil example have made the best rare. "There are two good officials," says the proverb, "one is dead, the other by yew born." This is an exaggeration, of course. We ourselves could tell of several incorruptible officials, such for example as Hui old Tso Tsung-tang, Chang Chih-tang, Lo Ping-chang, and others. But the westernized Chinese must have had their attention especially drawn to the degradation which has come on their country mainly through the vice of corruption in a monetary sense. The country reeks of it, and nobody denounces it more vigorously than those who have led their education in those countries of the west that can boast of simple honesty and purity in their administration. The westernized Chinese, then, has a physical advantage in dress, a mental advantage in the wider outlook of his better education, and a livelier sense of what is right from a moral standpoint. He should, when his qualities are fully appreciated, come to the front, and stay there.

MR. G. A. WOODCOCK.

POPULAR MAGISTRATE LEAVES FOR HOME.

Mr. G. A. Woodcock, one of our most popular magistrates, sails for home to-morrow on the Miyazaki Maru on eight months' leave of absence. His main reason for going home is to place his daughters at school.

Mr. Woodcock has been twenty years in the Colony, where he has made a host of friends, who will welcome him gladly on his return. His work on the bench has been what might be expected of a man of his sterling character.

It was not certain if Mr. Woodcock could leave just now, as both he and Mr. R. H. A. Craig, who takes his place, were on the list for leave. However, the Governor decided in his favour, and a well earned rest is now assured him.

SPEECH FRIGHT.

Sir John Byers sends some interesting particulars to the "British Medical Journal" on this subject. He quotes Lord Dufferin as saying that "No great orator has ever lived who did not feel very nervous before rising to his feet. I have often seen the legs of one of the most effective and heart-stirring speakers in the House of Lords, to whom that assembly never failed to listen, shake like an aspen leaf during the delivery of the first few sentences of his speech." Lord Dufferin told Sir John that this was Lord Derby. Lord Dufferin himself was always nervous about speaking, and in his later years the thought of having to speak lay heavy on his mind before hand. In this respect he resembled John Bright.

Lord Dufferin was wont to insist that no very good speech was ever made without a considerable amount of preparation, at all events until long practice had so cultivated the speaker's faculty as to render the art of thinking aloud with fervour and precision a second nature. Even so, he said, he had heard a Lord Chancellor break down, and a Prime Minister lose the thread of his discourse. He explained that, by preparation he did not mean learning a speech off by heart, but the saturation of the mind with a knowledge of the subject, and then the construction, not necessarily in writing, but in the mind, of a well-knit skeleton of the argument or exposition; finally, when out walking, or in the solitude of one's own room, the language in which the ideas may most fitly be clothed should be considered.

Speakers differ greatly in regard to the manner of preparation. Some write out the whole speech, and deliver it, like Sir James Paget, "paragraph by paragraph, sentence by sentence, word for word, comma and all," as Huxley once said in his presence. Others, like Huxley himself, will write out a speech, and then deliver something which, in wording at least, is widely different from the manuscript. Others, again, jot down a few headings, and speak from these. The rule which the "British Medical Journal" impresses on speakers is to have a message to deliver, to do so as briefly and in words as simple and direct as possible, and to sit down.

The Yokokuma Specie Bank, and the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China, have each sent £105 to the Mansion House Fund for the King Edward Memorial.

NATIONAL COLOURS.

INTERESTING INFORMATION.

We are not yet told what colour will be substituted for the red of French soldiers' trousers; but it is to be something in the way of khaki. The Government has been long in making up its mind, feeling a little anxious about the effect of such a change. In 1903 (writes Mr. Frederick Boyle in the "Pall Mall Gazette") we saw companies of infantry, a squadron of cavalry, and a battery of light artillery, with slouch hats, at the review on the National Fete, with the avowed purpose of testing public opinion. It was almost unanimous, frankly expressed, and the authorities perceived that they had better wait awhile. Before 1870 the abolition of the pantalon garance would have been almost as effective as the abolition of the tricolor to make "the chaps" go off of themselves. But France grows more serious year by year. Appeals to warlike glory do not find much hearing now, but, on the other hand, consideration for the private soldier has become much more general since none escapes conscription. And the public understands that if battles are to be won he must be made as inconspicuous as possible. So the decree has been issued at last.

The disappearance of the familiar blue coat and red trousers will leave our English scarlet the last survivor of the old national colours in Europe. Russia, indeed, maintains a regiment of the Guard clad in the uniform of Alexander the First, and Prussia has one arrayed in older fashion still—that of Frederick the Great. In each case it used to be the rule that every soldier should have a "turn-up" nose—the Muscovite copying the Teuton in this respect, doubtless. Vortan's grumble that the interesting custom is abandoned now. Perhaps, that variety of nose was commoner in former times. But these regiments are curiosities, renowned and glorious, but uncommonly ugly. The Austrian white was seen for the last time in the great review in 1878, when the Viennese turned out on mass to bid it good-bye. Imperial Princes, Generals, and, I think, officers in command of a regiment are still privileged to wear it.

CROMWELL AND ENGLAND'S RED.

There is no need to make a conscript army attractive in appearance. Tradition and sentiment demand feathers and spangles and glitter; but the pressure of economy would be irresistible even if it were not backed by prudence. A soldier must creep nowadays, not prance as of yore. Our scarlet holds its own with difficulty when the estimates mount every year; it will not survive compulsory service—some think, however, that science will put an end to war before that measure is carried, and standing armies will be dissolved. Red seems "natural" to the British soldier, but it is not very old. There was no uniform until Henry VIII. issued an ordinance commanding that all his foot soldiers should wear blue coats trimmed with red and breeches with one red leg and one blue. But the London train-bands always wore white, apparently, even "to their long close hose and shoes." One would have liked to see that grand review of 1539, described at length by Harrison, when the Lord Mayor and aldermen in white armor, with plumed hats of black velvet, steel breastplates, and silver-studded breastplates, and the rest, led 15,000 archers, pikemen, musketeers, and artillery, all snow-white from top to toe. Until Henry VIII. awarded the Royal supremacy, noblemen commissioned to raise forces for the Crown dressed them as they pleased—in their own livery, as a rule, and they returned to this practice on either side when the Civil War broke out. Hampden's regiment was green, Lord Brooke's purple, Essex's orange, Mandeville's blue, and so forth. It was the men who mount business, the leaders of the new model, who put a stop to this confusion. Why they chose red for the Parliamentary army does not appear, but Cromwell had already allotted it to his Ironsides. An old tradition explains his choice: he found a great stock of red cloth at Cambridge, and commandeered it. A newspaper of 1645 says:—"The men are red coats all, distinguished by the several facings of their coats—Venice red, breeches grey, or some good color." So our Royal scarlet was borrowed from the usurper.

IRELAND AND GREEN.

It would not be safe to mention in all companies the green is not the "natural" color of Ireland—there are enthusiasts who could not restrain their feelings or their fists at such blasphemy. But Burke, him of an Irishman whose authority is questioned only by the irreverent, declares with some warmth, "It is certain that azure, and azure only, has been the color of Ireland since the English conquest; and it is equally clear that green was not much in vogue with the great Celtic-Irish houses from which the Kings of Ireland were chosen." A reader who wishes to hear more of this audacious pronouncement may refer to "the vicissitudes of families." But certain facts are stated which appear to support it. The color of the Knights of St. Patrick is blue; the facings of the Royal Irish Regiment are blue; those of the French Brigade were red. The arms of Ireland are azure, three crowns or—the harp was introduced by Henry VIII. Ireland, on the Royal achievement, has a gold harp on a blue ground. There is, moreover, Reports of the Dalai Lama's arrival in India lately reminds us that yellow is, or was, a national color throughout the Far East. His Holiness wore a yellow silk robe, his sedan-chair was yellow, the Government hung his room at Darjeeling with yellow stuff, and provided him with a yellow "dandy" for paying visits. The deputation of Buddhist residents who welcomed him carried yellow banners, etc. All through the Malay countries yellow is sacred to royalty. For a subject to wear it was high treason once. So it was to a loss degree in Burma and Siam. It is the Imperial color in China. But in Europe yellow was actually hated in former times, and still is generally disliked.

FINANCIAL NEWS.

Messrs. Wheelock & Co., of Shanghai, report:—Our home-ward freight market has been rather quiet since we last wrote, mainly on account of the holidays which have just intervened; prospects for the near future, however, are good as there seems to be plenty of cargo in the interior awaiting shipment.

Castwise.—We have no change to report in this market as there has been practically no business done during past fortnight except the ordinary "routine" work by the regular liners who have continued to remain fairly "independent" throughout the season; orders for "tramp" tonnage, however, have been very scarce and we can hardly expect any revival until the opening of the north and the rise of water in the Yangtze.

In their coal report, the same firm states:—Japan.—As was only to be expected there has been practically no business done on this market since we last wrote and the present weak and unsettled state of exchange still further hampers business; in Japan prices rule very firm with an upward tendency, especially for the better grades of coal, owing to the scarcity of stocks and the stoppage of the export of Manchurian coal and prices locally have gone up all round in sympathy.

Manchurian Coal.—Since we wrote last we have received advice that the output from the Fushun Mines has been considerably reduced on account of the plague and that the export from Dalny has now stopped entirely for the same reason.

Thousands of refugees from the famine area have flocked to Nanjing, and many are in a pitiable state.

For the S.S. Loongsang, Mr. T. M. Nicol received from Manila another automobile of 50 h.p. This excellent machine is a La Buare for seven passengers. Mr. Nicol has found a splendid accommodation for his cars in Des Vaux Road, next to Messrs. Whiteaway, Laidlaw's, and has started business now under the name of the "Exile Garage."

THE OBSOLETE PLAIN WOMAN.

A writer in the "Art Chronicle" has a word to say on the much-neglected plain woman and her possibilities.

She may not be fair to outward view, but the writer says—nowadays no woman need be plain, using the word in the sense of ugly—unless she chooses to be so of her own free will—i.e., makes the worst instead of the best of herself.

ONE GOOD POINT.

The ugly woman is of all types and classes—fair, dark, between colors, nondescript, but generally she will be found to possess one good point to which she may dress up if she has the wit to do it. Let us consider what a frankly ugly woman can do to improve her personal appearance. Well, first and foremost, her figure should receive attention.

If she is short-waisted or narrow-chested, she should go to the best "corsetier" her means will permit her to afford; or if she is unable to spare as much money as this would mean, she should buy a reputable make of corsets, one that will apparently increase the length of her waist, and, in addition to doing this, add width to the narrow chest. Then her gowns should be carefully made by the best dress-maker she can afford, and she should not aim at a great variety of gowns, but rather possessing a few good ones which are smart and suitable to her circumstances. On the other hand, though I counsel "a few gowns," this must not be taken to mean that I advise my readers to whom these words may apply to put all their eggs in one or two baskets, and for the rest go shabby or, worse, "shabby smart." Far from it. The plain woman who wishes to make the best of herself must study every condition under which she will have or may have to appear, and her house gowns should be just as carefully chosen as those for street or visiting or evening wear.

WHAT TO AVOID.

Again, the plain woman must beware of copying styles obviously meant only for the beautiful. Picture-hats are not for her, nor the fluffy, essentially feminine style of dress, all lace and daintiness of fripperies, nor the blue ribbons and white muslin of the "ingenue." In winter the plain woman, while trying to be as smart and up to date as she can, should not go in for velvet and furs and style of headgear of the professional beauty or even of the pretty woman. Indeed, for spring, autumn, and winter wear the probability is that the tailor modes will suit her best, that is, unless she should happen to possess, as is sometimes the case, a figure utterly unsuited to this style. In the case of a thin or an unequally developed figure, tailor modes are, however, by far the safest style to choose, because a good tailor, by means of a little judicious padding, can do wonders with a bad figure. For those who are very stout, however, tailor-made garments, unless of the slim sac coat variety, are not to be, as a rule, recommended.

NO MORE BABIES IN 2015.

CORNELL PROFESSOR'S PREDICTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

There will be no children in the United States under five years of age in the year 2020, says the New York "Tribune," as quoted by the Paris edition of the "New York Herald." Babies, accordingly, will have disappeared from that country as early as 2015.

This is the mathematical conclusion of Prof. Walter F. Willcox, of Cornell University, recently announced to the American Statistical Association. The only hope of seeing babies in the United States after 2020, according to Prof. Willcox's calculation, is by possible importation from France, which, he says, will continue to have babies 80 years after the United States has quit.

"There is proportionately more race suicide in the United States than in France," said Prof. Willcox. An endorsement for the work was recommended to the American Sociological Association by Mr. George Elliott Howard, professor of sociology in the University of Nebraska. He declared the State should honour motherhood by endowing mothers.

SCIENCE OF THE AIR.
INTERIM REPORT.

The Advisory Committee for Aeronautics have issued an interim report on the work for the year 1910-11. The erection of the necessary buildings and the construction of apparatus occupied the greater part of the year, and the equipment installed has proved in general satisfactory for the purposes for which it was provided. Tests have been carried out on a large number of balloons, fabrics, and all are to be repeated on other promising materials.

WIND STRUCTURES.
For the further study of wind structures researches have been undertaken at Pyron Hill, Oxfordshire, by Mr. J. S. Dines, with a mechanical assistant, under the direction of the Meteorological Office. The locality has been selected because the work can be carried out there in conjunction with the investigation of the upper air for the Meteorological Office, which is in charge of Mr. W. H. Dines, F.R.S. The immediate object of the researches is to find out, by means of careful examination of instrumental records of various kinds, how far up the ordinary gustiness of wind extends, to trace whatever evidence can be obtained of vertical motion or rotary motion in the atmosphere, and to identify the conditions in which such motion exists.

In order to test for gustiness above the surface, apparatus has been designed which registers simultaneously the pull of a kite wire, with the fluctuations therein due to gusts, and the length of wire paid out. From the latter, with a knowledge of the vertical angle, the height of the kite can be approximately determined. A few records have been obtained, and in these the diminution of gustiness with height is clearly apparent.

Special gear has also been devised for the identification of rotary motion and vertical motion in the air.

TESTS ON MOTORS.
The question of tests on motors for aeronautical purposes engaged the attention of the Committee at an early date, and in the preliminary programme of work drawn up in June 1909, were included tests of motors for efficiency and for reliability and steadiness of running. The provision of the necessary equipment for carrying out such tests was at once put in hand, and an investigation into the performance of motors of different types has now been carried out.

The series of reports and memoranda, of which a number were printed as appendices to the Report for 1909-10, has been continued, and those of general interest will be prepared later for publication. The report by Sir G. Greenhill on the "Theory of a stream-line past a plane barrier, and of the discontinuity at the edge, with an application of the theory to an aeroplane," has now been completed and is ready for issue. The aim of the interim report has been to collect for reference the chief results in the theory of discontinuous fluid motion, so far as it has been carried at present, with extensions, such as those on vortex motion, likely to be useful in artificial flight.

The abstracts of technical papers on aeronautical questions have also been continued, and those will be printed in the report on the work of the current year.

Lord Raleigh signs the report as president of the committee.

SPORTING WAGERS.

The special correspondent of an English provincial paper tells a good story of Mr. W. Macneill, who rode Foolhardy in the Grand Stofon Steeplechase at Liverpool recently. Mr. Macneill had never ridden over the Liverpool fences before. He was offered a bet of £1,000 to £10 that he did not complete the course. He took no risks. He pulled his horse back 50 yards behind the others when the flag fell, so that no horse falling in front of him should bring Foolhardy down, and for the same reason he ran wide on the outside the whole of the way round. The terms of the wager decreed no time limit. All Mr. Macneill had to do to win his £1,000 was to jump the fences. Mr. Macneill's pleasure may therefore be imagined when he not only won his wager, but actually finished fifth.
